2. What is a cookie?

A cookie is a file that is downloaded onto your device (computer, tablet, smartphone) when you access certain websites. Cookies allow information about browsing behavior to be stored and retrieved and, in some cases, enable the user to be identified.

3. Purposes for which we use cookies

We use the information collected through cookies in order to:

Our intention is to send only useful and desired communications. You may revoke your consent to receive commercial communications at any time by using the unsubscribe link included in our emails.

4. Disclosure of your information

We will never disclose your personal data to third parties except in the following cases:

- To companies within the same corporate group, where applicable.

- If the company or substantially all of its assets were sold, data could be transferred to the purchaser.
- Where disclosure is necessary to comply with legal obligations or to protect the rights, property, or safety of the company, customers, or others (e.g., fraud prevention).

5. Storage and transfers

The data you provide is stored on secure servers managed by providers with whom we have data processing agreements. Most selected providers currently process data within the European Economic Area (EEA); however, some providers (e.g., Google services, Facebook, payment platforms) may involve transfers outside the EEA. In such cases, we implement appropriate safeguards (standard contractual clauses or other measures) in accordance with the GDPR.

We will not retain your personal data longer than necessary for the relevant purpose.

6. Internet data transmission and security

Data transmission over the internet is not completely secure. We adopt reasonable technical and organizational measures (e.g., SSL/TLS, access controls, third-party encryption of payment data) to protect your data. However, we cannot guarantee the absolute security of transmissions; any data transmission is carried out at your own risk.
